Autumn.

BY THE BARD OF THE MOUNTAIN.

Now vanish the hot rays of summer
As autumn the golden appears,
The western winds solemnly murmur,
And blustering winter draws near.

The forest a hue of deep yellow
Beneath the cool breezes assumes,
The failing sun, hazy and mellow,
The sere meadow faintly illumes.

October relieved by November,
Frost-pinioned to Lethe may fly,
And ushers bleak, hoary December,
Suggestive of hearths blazing high.

As nature puts off her green mantle
And dons her soft garment of white,
She changes her aspect so gentle,
Though fraught with allurements so bright.

Farewell to thy green shady bowers
Sweet summer, thou season of bliss,
Bright sunshine and heart-cheering flowers,
Reluctant thy charms we dismiss.

Instinctively turning our vision
We greet coming winter's approach,
Who, treating appeals with derision,
Congeals the whole earth by his breath.

The Story-Teller.

ON THE TRAP.

I was only a clown, a painted, grinning clown, attached on a small salary to a theatre in the capital of one of the little duchies into which Germany was divided before the genius and ambition of Bismark had effected its consolidation into the empire. My role was popular because everybody likes to laugh, and likes one who puts them in a laughing mood. My make-up was considered a marvel of perfection. My songs always took, and my gestures and grimaces never failed to elicit the most rapturous applause. It used to be said that my face must be made of India-rubber, it could be twisted and distorted into such strong expressions. But I hated the life, and my success made it more and more distasteful.

One night I went home completely worn out in body and mind. My little sister Ada, fifteen years old, and light and graceful as a sylph, who was engaged as a danseuse at the same theatre, also seemed dispirited and worn. The play had been running forty nights, and the whole company was heartily sick of it. But it was not this alone which exerted a depressing influence on my spirits that evening. For many weeks I had been losing my heart to Fraulein Dora, the principal danseuse of the theatre, who was no less lovely in mind and heart than in her person. She was the most beautiful woman I had ever seen; tall, well formed, graceful; with a step like a fairy queen; large, thoughtful woman eyes; and a sweet, winning smile. What first drew me to her was her kindness to my sister, whom she took every opportunity to befriend and assist in her profession. This was the more surprising, because Ada promised to become a dangerous rival; and, in the theatrical profession, jealousy is the rule, and generosity the exception. So I learned to like Dora, and then to love her. But so did everybody else. All the gentry of the place fell in love with her, and raved about her beauty and her dancing, in a way that nearly drove me wild with jealousy. I was in love in the old-fashioned way we read of in novels—I am not ashamed to confess it—eager to kiss the ground on which she trod, and would not believe that any one else could love and worship her with the same devotion. I must not omit to say that Dora, in the midst of all this adulation, displayed the most discreet and modest behaviour. She was always attended to and from the theatre by her mother, and always returned the rich presents which were showered upon her.

Among all who paid court to Dora, I feared only one, the young, rich, handsome, and accomplished Count Ernest von Walters, who pressed his suit with unremitting ardor. What chance had the poor clown against this man? Yet I fancied if he were only out of the way I need not despair of winning her. Did she not love my sister, and had she not often spoken kindly to me, and praised my acting and singing? But this day I had learned the worst—that her kindness to me sprang only from a gentle and friendly feeling for the brother of the girl she had learned to love like a sister, and that she had promised to be the wife of Count von Walters. What wonder that I went to my lodgings with despair in my heart!

My little sister exerted herself to make things cheerful in our quiet sitting-room. She suspected nothing of the real cause of my downheartedness, for she, my confidant in everything else, had never been intrusted with the secret of my love for Dora; and, in the hope of drawing me out of my moody silence, prattled on about a number of unimportant matters. She was interrupted by a knock at the door, followed by the entrance of our landlady. The good soul apologized for coming in at so late an hour, but the postman had brought a letter for me just after we had left for the theatre, and as it bore a foreign postmark, she thought it might be important I should get it that evening. I thanked her mechanically, but a glance at the postmark caused me to tear the letter open with eager and trembling fingers; for I had often heard my father speak of an only brother who had settled in England in early youth, and from whom vague reports came, from time to time, of a successful mercantile career. The letter was postmarked London, and the heavy black border lines told the story before the seal was broken. My uncle was dead. He had never married, and on his death-bed, remembering his only brother, he had left all his wealth to him or his children. For a moment I felt stunned and faint; and Ada, throwing her arms about my neck, begged me to tell her what bad news was in my letter to make me look so strange and pale. I took her on my knee and told her we were rich, and would have no more need to act in the theatre. We would leave this miserable little town and go to Berlin.

To my surprise, Ada again put her arms about my neck, and whispered softly, "Need we leave the theatre immediately, dear brother?"

"No, child," said I, wondering what she could mean; "but tell me why you should want to stay another day, when you can leave at once and be free from this slavey?"

'Because, dear brother," she answered, hesitating and blushing, "Fraulein Dora told me I was a great deal prettier than she was, and a better dancer; and that I should have the first place in the new dance they are to put on the stage next week. Oh, I would like to have such a triumph once! It would be such a pleasant way to say good-bye to the stage."

I could deny her nothing, my little sister; and though to me it was like going into the torture room of the Inquisition to enter the theatre and see Count Ernest on such familiar term swith Dora, I consented for the present to conceal my good fortune from our friends, and go on just the same as if nothing had happened.

The eventful evening came at length. The play was interspersed with ballet-dancing, and was to end in a grand transformation scene in which Ada and Dora were to rise as sea nymphs, in a shell-like car, from the waters of a mimic lake. It so happened that, just before the last scene, I went into the room underneath the stage, where the machinery for raising the car was placed, impelled by a strange foreboding of impending misfortune, to assure myself that everything was in order; and that no precaution against accident had been neglected. There I found the master machinist, a dark and gloomy visaged man, standing by the car, muttering to himself in an undertone, "Bettter she should die than marry the count. He has bewitched her, as he does all women. A little slit would—"

"What are you muttering to yourself?" I asked him, suddenly; "and what do you mean by these mysterious words?"

He faced me, as if struck by an unexpected blow.

"I was only examining the machinery to see that everything was right," he answered, sullenly, and turned away.

I carefully examined the cords by which the car was raised. Everything appeared to be secure and in good order; and I went back to my place, trying to laugh myself out of my apprehensions. But though it was easy to argue that all was right, and that my fears arose merely from some explicable disorder of the brain, I could not feel secure. I was positive that some frightful misadventure would occur before the play was over; and every nerve was stained in the effort to maintain a calm exterior.

The play progressed. The curtain rose upon the magnificent transformation scene; and the plaudits of the audience grew tumultuous as the splendors unrolled before them. At length the car began to rise slowly and majestically, to low, sweet strains of music. I watched, with scarcely beating heart and bated breath, the first appearance of the beautiful vision—for like a vision it looked, rising, and still rising, the car resplendent with all the tinsel which shone like gold, and silver, and diamonds. A sound as of many tinkling fountains mingled with the strains of delicious music; fairy land seemed opening upon the sight, with arching bowers and far-reaching vistas, and myriads of elfin forms disporting on the ground and in the air. For a moment I was fascinated, when Ada and Dora, in all their beauty, rose above the lake, their stately car seemingly lifted by invisible hands. I forgot my apprehensions, and once more breathed freely.

Suddenly there was a dreadful crash, and a wild cry filled the house. The car had fallen. For an instant I felt rooted to the spot where I was standing, and then recovering my senses, rushed forward to learn the worst. As I made my way through the narrow passage under the stage, I heard some one say in a pitying tone: "Poor thing, she will never dance again!" Which was it? Ada? Dora? I fought my way through the crowd of actors and attendants, and saw my little Ada lying senseless in Dora's arms. Throwing myself on my knees, I took her cold hands in both of mine. "My dear friend," said Dora, who was weeping silently, "she is not dead, though dreadfully hurt. The surgeon will be here directly. Compose yourself. She is reviving!"

My little darling opened her eyes, with a deep sigh, and looked about with a bewildered gaze.

"Hush, little one," said Dora," softly, as she saw Ada about to speak. "Lie still and be patient till the surgeon comes."

The gentle sufferer closed her eyes, and her little hands pressed mine with a tender grasp. The surgeon was soon on the spot. He assured me that Ada had sustained no fatal injury, but it was doubtful whether she would be able to walk again. With a piteous cry. she fell back in Dora's arms, and fainted dead away.

I had noticed no one but Ada and Dora, but at this moment I was conscious that the count was kneeling beside me, and had clasped Dora's hand. "Better she than you, my love!" he murmured.

"Dora gave him a quick look of reproof. "This is no time for love-making," she answered, withdrawing her hand. "Have you no feeling for the poor girl lying here, whose whole life must be one of misery and sorrow?"

"What is this ballet girl to me?" answered the count, stung to the quick, and for a moment thrown off his guard. "Of course, I am sorry for her," he added the next moment, "but—"

At this moment Ada opened her eyes again, and a faint blush struggled with the paleness in her cheeks, as her gaze fell upon the count. A beautiful smile played on her trembling lips, and she reached her hand toward him. "Oh, my love," she said in a low whisper—a whisper which first sent the blood mantling into Dora's face and then left it paler than snow—"you are near and I—"

Something in the count's face stopped her words.

"The girl is wandering," he said coldly. "She does not know what she is saying."

We carried Ada home, and through the long illness which followed, Dora was her constant nurse and companion. To this dear friend was confided with many tears the secret of her heart. The count had won her love, and promised to ask my consent to their union. Unsuspecting and confiding she knew nothing of his attentions to Dora, and it was by his wish that she had never mentioned his name to me. I heard afterward that he and Dora met but once after the accident, and that he endeavored to defend his perfidy on the plea that he was only amusing himself with Ada, and never had seriously thought of making her his wife. "So much the worse for you, count," said the true hearted woman. "I shall never be your wife and never want to see your face again."

We are married now, Dora and I. From loving Ada she learned in time to love me, and the sweet and gentle invalid, who never again will walk until she steps upon the heavenly shore, is happy in our love. No murmur ever escapes her lips. Her sweet face is never clouded. Since Dora learned her sad story, the count's name has never passed my sister's lips, nor has she ever in any way alluded to him. But Dora found her one day weeping silently over a picture which she put away without being seen.

I have not told how the accident happened. The master machinist, himself in love with Dora, had cut several strands of the cords by which the car was secured. He openly avowed his crime, and only regretted that Dora had not been killed. "She rejected me with scorn," he said on his trial. "I was resolved she should never give her hand to another." He was manifestly a maniac. I can never forgive myself for not watching him more closely after that encounter under the stage.

Education of Destitute Children.

The Board of State Charities, through its President, Mr. George L. Harrison, submitted to the Constitutional Convention last week a memorial in behalf of the education of the poor and destitue children of the Commonwealth, which the present Constitution assumes more especially to provide for, but which does not at all reach the lowest element of that class. This memorial presents a clear and convincing argument in favor of a constitutional provision for the education of the class referred to, which was induced by the fact that two sections of the article on "legislation," viz: sections 18 and 19, practically shut it out from the benefits of public instruction which are freely offered at the public cost, even to those who can readily obtain it at their own expense. The more liberal of these two sections requires a two-thirds vote of all the members of both branches of the Legislature to legalize any grant for charitable or educational purposes to any institution not absolutely under State control; and this necessarily excludes the only possible instrumentality for reclaiming and educating vagrant children, namely: private effort and private benevolence, receiving any aid from the State for fulfilling what is the State's proper work, but which the State cannot perform by any system which she has in operation.

The main objection to a provision for aiding in the education of this low element of the youthful population is, that it is a "charitable" work, with which the State should have nothing to do; or if so, she must own and control all the machinery which does the work, that is, she shall not contribute to the House of Refuge, the Asylums for the Blind and for the Deaf Mutes and the Imbecile Children; or to the Hospital for the Insane of Dixmont, Allegheny county, on the same terms as to the penitentiaries or the two other insane asylums, at Harrisburg and Danville, respectively; because the former, being private charitable corporations, may be considered unsafe agencies to which to entrust the public funds or the public confidence. It would seem that the half century's experience of the management of these prescribed institutions should have satisfied the members of the Convention that this very element of private effort and beneficence, which enters into their Constitution and their administration, has been the greatest safeguard of their integrity and the strongest stimulus to their success. But concerning the education of the neglected and destitute children of the State, it seems clear that charity is not invoked from the Convention or the Legislature at all. It is simply right. The policy of providing for universal education is accepted. Shall, then the blind be excluded on account of their blindness, or the mute for their want of speech? Shall they, too, not enjoy the rights or privileges which the Legislature may freely accord to their less dependent fellows? Because they are blind and deaf and dumb, shall they be enforced to ignorance? Must they see the lessons and hear the voices which the common school teachers employ in the education of the more favored proteges of the State, or lose their share of the State's bounty? There is a character above the Constitution, which it seems to us is invaded by the restriction which has been imposed upon the legislation in reference to the education of all classes of defectives, with which may fairly be numbered these destitute and neglected children, in whose behalf the Board of Public Charities has memorialized the Convention. It is the character of "Equal Rights." The argument of Mr. Harrison, which the Convention so unceremoniously disposed of the other day—thinking it is not worth while either to have it read or printed in their journal—proves most clearly and conclusively that "this class of children has not been reached by our public schools; and that this is the lesson not only of our own past experience, but wherever the system of free schools has been tried. They may be ever so free and open to all, but these children must remain outside." And they "remain outside," because of some deficiency, which, as in the cases of the blind, the deaf and dumb, and the imbecile, afflicts their condition. They are destitute of care and guardianship; they have no sure means of support; they must beg or steal, or do some uncertain and degrading work in order to obtain food whereby to live and the clothing to cover their nakedness. This, then, is their deficiency, and for this they are no more responsible than are the blind and the mute and the feeble minded. Must they starve or go naked in order that they may avail themselves of the educational provisions of the State? Mr. Harrison takes the ground that where this "deficiency" is supplied by private bounty, the State at least aid in the "educational" service, by providing a given sum for each inmate of schools established for industrial training and education of this class by private effort, whenever or wherever established; the State as a matter of course, exercises the right of inspection to see that the money it grants is not squandered or misapplied, and reserving the power of revoking its sanction and withholding its aid, whenever it judges that there is occasion for such a course. This fundamental evil, which, if not met and overcome, will render vain many of the attempted reforms of the Convention, has been thoroughly appreciated in countries where the necessity is less paramount than it is in a democratic land. It was found in England that, under the Elementary Education act, which is of a compulsory character, this class of the population could not be provided for, and the government, after full experience of the benefit to the State of the industrial schools, which were educated by private labor and benevolence, gave such schools a recognized status, and has since systematically inspected them and aided them by moderate per capita grants. This policy has had the effect of extending their number very largely, and many children go out of these schools—prepared by day domestic training and reformed by industrial work from their erratic habits, into the free public schools—and the condition of the whole juvenile population of England has been changed. In the language of a distinguished member of the International Congress recently held in London, "the system has cut up juvenile vagrancy by the roots, and almost destroyed juvenile crime in many localities.

It seems unaccountable that with us, where the only surety for our institutions is the virtue and intelligence of the people, it should not be thought worth while to reclaim that wild, vagrant and abject youth who live, of necessity, in the atmosphere of ignorance and debasement, and who not only furnish the material for our prisons and almshouses, but largely aid in making the very laws under which we live. We trust that the Convention may revise its work in this behalf, or at least think fit to answer the argument of the Board of Public Charities.—The Age, October 6, 1873.

How to Cure a Cold.

One of our citizens who has been troubled with a severe cold on the lungs, effected his recovery in the following simple manner: He boiled a little hoarhound and boneset together, and then drank freely of the tea before going to bed. The next day he took five pills, put one kind of plaster on his breast, another under his arms, and still another on his back.—Under advice from an experienced old lady he took all these with an oyster knife in the afternoon, and and slapped on a mustard plaster instead. His mother put some onion drafts to his feet, and gave him a lump of tar to swallow. Then he put hot bricks to his feet, and went to bed. The next morning another old lady came in with a bottle of goose oil, and gave him a dose of it in a quill, and an aunt arrived at about the same time from Bethel, with a bundle of sweet fern, which she made into tea and gave it to him every half hour until noon, when he took a big dose of salts.

After dinner his wife, who had seen a fine old lady of great experience in doctoring on Franklin street, gave him two pills of her make, about the size of an English walnut, and of a like shape, and two spoonfuls of a homemade balsam to keep them down. Then he took half a pint of hot rum at the suggestion of a sea captain, who resided in the next house, and steamed his legs with an alcohol bath.

At this crisis two of the neighbors arrived who saw at once that his blood was out of order, and they gave him half a gallon of spearmint tea, and a big dose of castor oil. Before going to bed he took eight of a new kind of pills, wrapped a piece of flannel soaked in hot vinegar and salt around his neck, and had feathers burnt on a shovel in his room. He is now fully cured and full of gratitude. We advise our readers to cut this out and keep it where it can be found when danger threatens.

A Tough Story.

Old John B———, of the town of W———, this State, was, during his life, one of the most inveterate liars and story-tellers extant. The shoemaker that John patronized, lived about a half mile from the town, and, in John's estimation could beat anything in the town, or out of it, mending or making a pair of boots or shoes. One morning, late in the fall, John started early to have a pair of shoes mended for his wife. As was his custom, when going out of town, he shouldered his well-worn shot gun, thinking that he might perchance get some game on the way. He had got half way to his destination, when he heard a great "flutterin," as he expressed it, overhead. He looked up and with pleasure saw a flock of wild geese on their migratory journey to warmer climates. John's gun had but one load. He blazed away, but was astonished that no game came down. He loaded hastily and in ramming the second load, his ramrod stuck tight. He had no time to loose, and so he shot ramrod and all at the rapidly passing flock. Nothing fell. John proceeded on his way wondering how he had missed, for he was a good shot. After getting through at the shoemaker's, and on his return, and when near the spot where he had made his vain shots in the morning, he heard another "flutterin." On looking up he was agreeably surprised to see the ramrod he had shot away early in the morning, on its return, "strung full of as fine game as he had ever shot in his life." John of course was surprised, and so were we when he told us the story.

Motherly.

What a dear old Saxon epithet is the word "motherly." Motherly kindness, attention, nurture! The word is never unwelcome when fairly applied. Motherly influence; who has not felt it? Motherly love; who has not joyed in it? Motherly self-denial; often the secret heading of the longest chapters of her life, the memory of which long survives them all. Motherly self-sacrifice; true to the last, often reappearing in some posthumous expression, like a voice from the tomb. My friend, the Rev. John Burbidge, of St. Stephen's, Sheffield, put it to the mothers and sons of his church: "Does not history tell us how St. Agustine, Theoderet, Basil and St. Chrasostum owed everything to a mother's prayers? Have we not read how Bishop Hall was dedicated to the service of Christ by his mother on her death-bed; how Payson traced all his hopes and usefulness to the Christian nurture of his home; how Brainerd ascribed his deep religious feelings to the education of his early years; how Pfilip Henry and his five sisters avowed that what piety they possessed they owed under God to their parents; how James Montgomery traced his love for spiritual things to the instruction received in childhood; how the mother of the Wesleys left impressions on the character of her illustrious sons which were never effected; how Romaine Doddridge, Felix Neff, Leigh Richmonds, Richard Knill and Robert Moffat all tell the melting and moulding influence of the Christian homes amid which they were reared?"—Quiver.

Fashions.

The striking features of the prevailing fashions are:

Compression of the heart, lungs and liver.

Compression of the feet and tipping of the heels.

Dyed, burned and crimped hair.

Freckle erasers, balms, rouge, eye-brow dark, lip-carminator and nail pink.

Ear-rings.

Belladonna, to brighten the eyes, and arsenic, slate-pencils and pie to whiten the face.

A hump on the back.

Fans like daggers, umbrellas like shillelahs, and knapsacks laboriously buckled around the wasted place called the waist.

Hair clipped on the forehead.

Floating hair.

The less brains inside of the head the more hair bought for the outside of it.

All the ornaments possible to be gotten on the head, hands and neck.

Can these striking characteristics be found in association retrogressive, brutal or aboriginal? If they can, a suspicion is justified as to whether the theory of evolution in female fashions be correct.—Miss Buchanan in Chicago Tribune.

Around the Fireside.

Heaven.

Beyond these chilling winds and gloomy skies,
Beyond death's cloudy portal,
There is a land where beauty never dies,
And love becomes immortal.

A land whose light is never dimmed by shade,
Whose fields are ever vernal;
Where nothing beautiful can ever fade,
But bloom for aye, eternal.

We may not know how sweet the balmy air,
How bright and fair its flowers;
We may not hear the songs that echo there,
Through those enchanted bowers.

The city's shining towers we may not see,
With our dim earthly vision;
For death, the silent warden, keeps the key
That opes those gates elysian.

But sometimes when down the western sky
The fiery sunset lingers,
Its golden gates swing inward noiselessly,
Unlocked by unseen fingers.

And while they stand a moment half ajar,
Gleams from the inner glory
Stream brightly through the azure vault afar,
And half reveal the story.

Light in Darkness.

There came to Richmond, during the late war, a company of Union officers, who had been captured at the battle of Gettysburg. Among them was a chaplain from New England, whose invincible cheerfulness had been the wonder of his comrades. He had braved many a danger, had marched many a weary mile with blistered feet, and spent many a sleepless night caring for the sick and wounded; but "love had made his labor light, and the suffering easy to bear," and he had never known, in all his soldier life, one despondent moment. But now he stood a captive before the walls of Libby Prison, waiting in the storm for his turn to enter and be searched. He looked up at the grated window; no light gleamed down upon him. He listened; no friendly voice greeted his ear. The great building seemed a living tomb. He knew that hundreds were there, and yet no sound of life. Visions of home swept in upon his soul from the surrounding gloom. He thought of his wife and little ones waiting long and vainly for his return.

It was the darkest hour of his life. He sat down upon the curbstone and wept like a child.

Just then, far up in the third story of the prison, a voice rang out strong and clear upon the night air,

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

Other voices joined in; all parts were sung. Hundreds were singing—strongly, cheerfully, gratefully. The very foundations seemed to shake with the thunder of their praise. The harsh voices of the guard were drowned. The little company of drenched and shivering soldiers below felt their souls "marching on," to the tune of Old Hundred from the depths of gloom and despondency up to life and light again. The transition was wonderful.

No happier man lay down upon the floor that night than the New England chaplain. "Glorify ye the Lord in the fires." (Isaiah xxiv, 15). Sing the doxology, whatever heavens frown above you, and whatever waves threaten to engulf you. As long as you can see the cross on which He died in agony for you, let a heart burdened with its gratitude break out in constant thanksgiving.—Our Paper.

The Clergyman and the Infidel.

Some years ago a well known clergyman delivered a series of discourses against Atheism, in a town some of the citizens of which were known to be infidels. A few days afterward he took passage in a steamer ascending the Mississippi, and found on board several of the citizens of that town, among whom was a noted infidel. So soon as this man discovered the clergyman, he commenced his blasphemies; and when he perceived him reading at one of the tables, he proposed to his companions to go with him to the opposite side of the table and listen to some stories he had to tell about religion and religious men which he said would annoy the old preacher. Quite a number, prompted by curiosity, gathered around him to hear his vulgar stories and anecdotes, all of which were pointed against the Bible and its ministers.

The preacher did not raise his eyes from the book which he was reading, nor appear to be the least troubled by the presence of the rabble. At length the infidel walked up to him, and rudely slapping him on the shoulder, said, "Old fellow, what do you think of these things?" The clergyman calmly pointed towards the land, and said, "Do you see that beautiful landscape spread out in such quiet loveliness before you?" "Yes." It has a variety of flowers, plants, and shrubs that are calculated to fill the beholder with delight." "Yes." "Well, if you were to send out a dove, it would pass over that scene and see in it all that was beautiful and lovely, and delight itself in gazing at and admiring it; but if you were to send out a buzzard over precisely the scene, it would see in it nothing to fix its attention, unless it could find in it some rotten carcass that would be loathsome to all other animals. It would alight and gloat upon that with exquisite pleasure." "Do you mean to compare me with a buzzard, Sir?" said the infidel, coloring deeply. "I made no allusion to you, Sir," said the clergyman, very quietly. The infidel walked off in confusion, and went by the name of "The Buzzard" during the remainder of the passage.

"That's Me."

A poor Hottentot in Southern Africa lived with a good Dutchman, who kept up family prayer daily. One day he read, "two men went up into the temple to pray." The poor savage, whose heart was already awakened, looked earnestly at the reader, and whispered, "Now I'll learn how to pray." The Dutchman read on, "God, I thank Thee that I am not as other men." "No, I am not, but I am worse," whispered the Hottentot. Again the Dutchman read, "I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess." "I don't do that. I don't pray in that manner. What shall I do?" said the distressed savage. The good man read on until he came to the publican "standing afar off." "That's where I am," said the Hottentot. "Would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven," read the other. "That's me," cried his hearer. "But smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner!" "That's me; that's my prayer!" cried the poor creature, and, smiting on his dark breast, he prayed, "God be merciful to me a sinner!" until, like the poor publican, he went down to his house a saved and happy man.

The Huntingdon Journal.

J. R. DURBORROW, - - - - - EDITOR

HUNTINGDON, PENN'A.

Wednesday Morning, October 29, 1873.

Circulation LARGER than any other Paper in the Juniata Valley.

☞ Iowa gives a heavy Republican majority, as usual.

☞ The Globe crows lustily over the election of a few Democrats last week. The Monitor does too. The Republicans, who were deluded, see where they are placed by those who duped them.

☞ The last Globe is very sore, of course, over the defeat of McAteer. Dunn and his friends can now see how sincere they were in supporting him. Bah! the old thing is badly busted!

☞ We received several communications, in reply to "Oneida," and as we have not the space to publish all, we concluded to publish that which viewed the matter from a Huntingdon stand point.

☞ The editor of the Globe is the only man that we know who could hurrah at a funeral. His faction was beaten out of sight, and yet he crows as lustily over the election of Democrats as the most ardent Democrat in the town. Queer, ain't it?

☞ The Globe charges us with having manufactured an affidavit for Wilber F. Cunningham. If we hear any more of this we shall be compelled, in self-defence, to publish the affidavits just as they were handed to us, which will throw some light on the subject.

☞ The Globe and the Monitor have come fairly together at last. Both cheered lustily over the defeat of a few of our candidates. Well, well, we could not expect anything else from Democratic papers. The Monitor is honest, and here it has the advantage of its rival.

Huntingdon county has given a decided majority for the Republican ticket, the Guss, Woods faction polling but a small vote. Capt. Burchinell goes to Harrisburg. Hard work and the home thrusts of the Journal did it. Hurrah for Durborrow!—Bedford County Press.

Thankee, Joe. We only did our duty—but we cooked the Guss goose effectually.

☞ The Leaguers boast very much of their standing by their ticket, and yet they mourn 'in sorrow sore" over the defeat of McAteer. The truth of the whole matter is this: the JOURNAL whipped them up to the support of their candidates. This may not be palatable information, but it is the naked truth.

☞ Hon. Samuel Henry, of Cambria county, who has just been returned to the Assembly for the third time, from that county, is prominently named in connection with the Speakership, of the House of Representatives. We are unacquainted with Mr. Henry, but if half is true that is alledged of his popularity, he will make a formidable candidate.

☞ The Leaguers, on the receipt of the first election intelligence, like the Globe of week before last, sought their holes with faces as long as mules, until they learned that part of the Democratic ticket was elected; then they came out and crowed more lustily than the Monitor. Our duped Republican friends can now see what they were used for.

☞ We told the Republicans, repeatedly, who felt disposed to adhere to Woods and Guss, that they were only being made use of to elect the Democratic ticket, and that they were to be drifted into the Democratic party as soon as possible, and the last Globe fully proves the correctness of our repeated assertions. It appeals for Democratic aid for the future.

☞ The monopolists have been routed in the Constitutional Convention. We trembled lest all our hopes would be blasted; but we are happy to say that the honest men in the Convention stood firm, and the scenes which have been yearly enacted at Harrisburg, have failed for once, and the people are to have some rights in the future which even railroads are bound to respect. The Convention will very likely adjourn this week.

☞ The Globe insists that the Leaguers, for once, stuck to their ticket, and that they run one-third of the Republican vote of the county. Any sane man would suppose this was a pretty bad beat, and yet, strange to say, it crows very lustily over the election of the Democratic candidates. It now comes out square for the Democrats, into whose hands it has been playing all the while. How do the Republicans, that it has been deceiving all this time, like it?

☞ The Globe continues to reiterate its falsehoods, in regard to the Yenter's Hall Convention, to mitigate its rejoicing over the success of a portion of the Democratic ticket. There never was a fairer conducted Convention assembled in the county than the one in question. The policeman was there by a precedent established by Guss and others in 1871, and the committee on contested seats was selected by the Convention itself, and these are the principal features objected to. If the policeman was right in 1871, when nothing was said, he was right in 1873, and no one but a fool would question the right of the Convention to select its own committee on contested seats.

☞ The friends of the regular Republican county ticket in Huntingdon have fought a hard, but successful fight. Last year the county gave Hartranft only 550 majority; and this year, although they have had to fight against a formidable bolt, got up in the interest of a troublesome and persistent faction, they have given the State ticket 700 majority, in spite of the bolt. Now that this factional fight has been fought out, we may reasonably anticipate that we have seen and heard the last of it. The bolters staked their all on the independent move they got up, and having been thoroughly beaten, should be content to drop their useless struggle.—Pittsburgh Commercial.

THE CLOVEN FOOT.

The Globe of last week urges McAteer to contest the seat of Burchinell. If the editor of that paper were really a Republican, as he pretends to be, why is he so anxious to point out to Mr. McAteer how he might even yet defeat the will of the people by a technical objection to the election boards of this town? In doing this he either wilfully falsifies or talks about what he does not understand, and it is a maxim that he who tells what he does not know to be true, tells a lie. He alleges the bill to divide the borough into four wards was drawn by Samuel T. Brown, esq., and that it is deficient in not providing for the appointment of election officers to hold the first election under it. The bill in question was the same which also provides for a loan for water works in this borough, and was drawn by J. S. Africa, esq. and being drawn and offered in the Session of 1872, when election officers were elected at the fall election, there was no necessity for naming election officers in the bill.—The bill not being passed that winter, the same bill was passed in the winter of 1873, without providing for the change which had taken place in the election laws in the meantime. Mr. Brown had nothing to do with drawing the bill, but when the Pamphlet Laws of 1873 were published he observed the deficiency and pointed out to those who had drawn and passed it, the proper mode of providing for the omission, and election officers were accordingly agreed upon by the representatives of both political parties, appointed by the Court, and afterwards elected at the polls.

If Mr. McAteer wants to upset the election in this borough he must get better counsel than the very learned and reverend gentleman who trains orphans in the way they ought not to go. It may possibly turn out that the gentlemen who have taken part in this matter understand their business quite as well as the editor of the Globe understands his.

We congratulate Senator Scott on his glorious success in his own county. He has had a severe fight with a faction of men calling themselves republicans, but who care very little for the principles of the party. Now that he has so effectually crushed his personal enemies, who were jealous of the proud position he has won for himself in the State and Nation, we hope they will be content to let him alone. This country has produced few men equal in all respects to Senator Scott, and his worth is known and appreciated by the people, who will not permit his bright reputation to suffer from the assaults of the pigmies who would pull him down to the level with themselves.—Bradford Reporter.

The above, from the organ of the unflinching Republicans of Bradford county, is but one of the many similar notices which have reached us since the election, showing how the personal malignity of the factionists of this county is appreciated elsewhere in the State. It got no encouragement from anybody but Democrats, who now laugh at and despise their tools, and to such companionship we dismiss them.

☞ The Bellefonte (Tuten) Republican, discourses upon the late Senatorial fight after this fashion:

"And who defeated John Irwin, Jr., for the Senate? Centre County gave him more than her party vote; Huntingdon, to which before the election all eyes had been anxiously turned, stood up to the work nobly, giving Irwin an increased majority; but the Mifflin and Juniata Republicans proved traitors and openly bolted the nomination. There was no excuse for this. The fitness of Mr. Irwin for the position nobody, not even his opponents called in question. These renegade republicans of Mifflin and Juniata may yet have to take a dose of their own medicine. Much as we might regret such a course it will be but natural for the bolters in this county to remember and pay their respects in future to the bolters of Juniata and Mifflin. Although these birds of a feather would not exactly cooperate together, yet the result to the party would be about the same and brought about by similar causes."

☞ An enthusiastic and zealous opponent of the League, in the "lower end," writes us:

"You have done well. However do not lay down your pen yet. Nothing but hard knocks will do the Leaguers and their allies. Stand up for the right! They know you mean business. Hard knocks tell, remember. You did your part well!"

We are glad to know that our feeble efforts to overthrow the League are appreciated. We shall not spare the leaders when we think there is anything to be made by showing them up.

☞ The Bedford Gazette makes big I's over the result of the election in that county. We are not surprised at their laughing over the stupidity of the Republicans in putting up a Chairman of the County Committee against whom they could conduct their entire campaign without any reference to the candidates running. We are sorry for our friends. They, however, have learned a lesson which they will not likely repeat.

☞ We hear universal regret expressed on the part of those who allowed themselves to be duped into the support of the Potato Bug ticket. They uniformly say that they were under the impression that the majority of the party was in sympathy with Woods and Guss. They are satisfied now, and assure us that they will not be caught in such an insignificant movement again.

☞ The Ohio Democrats have elected their Governor by a few hundred majority, and this little success has so turned the heads of those who run the party that they are perfectly insane. They propose now to elect the next President and everything from that down. We are pleased that they are elated. But the scene is rather a ghastly one. The idea of a corpse laughing is always repulsive.

☞ The following is the official vote for Senator in this district, viz:

	Waream, D.	Irwin, R.
Mifflin	1,829	1,356
Juniata	1,430	1,146
Huntingdon	2,258	2,912
Centre	2,947	2,565
Totals	8,464	7,979

Waream's majority in the district, 485.

☞ Philadelphia has adopted the Reading fire alarm system.

Chief Justice James Thompson: I consider "Hoofland's German bitters" a valuable medicine in case of attacks of indigestion or dyspepsia. I can certify this from my experience of it. Hon. Chief Justice George Sharswood: I have found by experience that "Hoofland's German Bitters" is a very good tonic, relieving dyspeptic symptoms almost directly. They are not alcoholic. CENTAUR LINIMENT.

There is no pain, which the Centaur Liniments will not relieve, no swelling they will not subdue, and no lameness which they will not cure. This is strong language, but it its true. They have produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swelling, caked breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, galls, &c., upon the animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. They are counter-irritant, all healing pain relievers. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless and the wounded are healed without a scar. The recipe is published around each bottle They sell as no article ever before sold, and they sell because they do just what they pretend to do. Those who now suffer from rhumatism, pain or swelling deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment, white wrapper. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—these liniments are worth your attention. No family should be without them. "White wrapper for family use;" Yellow wrapper for animals. IMPORTANT RAILWAY DECISION—LET EVERY TRAVELER READ.—The opinion of Judge Sharswood, of the Supreme Court, in the case of Beale against the Pennsylvania Railroad, delivered some time ago, says a cotemporary, is one of great interest to the public as well as to the railroad companies. The case in the lower court was brought by the widow and heirs of Thomas Beale to recover damages for his killing, by the railroad company, at a public crossing in the village of Patterson. Mr. Beale was driving across the railroad track, in a wagon drawn by one horse, and was struck and killed by the Fast Line east. On the trial, counsel for the company requested Judge Bucher to say to the jury, as matter of law, that as the uncontroverted testimony showed that the unfortunate man killed did not stop before driving on the track, there could be no recovery. The Judge told the jury this was the law, but left it to them to find whether the approach of the train could have been seen by Beale, and instructed them if it could not have been, they might find a verdict for the plaintiffs. This the jury did, and the company took the case to the Supreme Court, Judge Sharswood, in settling the law, says:

"There never was a more important principle settled, than that the fact of the failure to stop immediately before crossing a railroad track, is not merely evidence of negligence for the jury, but negligence per se, and a question for the Court. It was important, not as much to railrod companies as to the traveling public. Collisions of this character have often resulted in the loss of hundreds of valuable lives—of passengers on trains—and they will do so again, if travelers crossing railroads are not taught their simple duty, not to themselves only, but to others. * * The Judge should, upon the uncontradicted evidence, have directed a verdict for the defendants." The Supreme Court further decide that the "duty of stopping is more manifest where an approaching train cannot be seen or heard, than where it can."

From this opinion it would seem that the whole responsibility, of an accident happening at a crossing, rests upon the unfortunate traveler who attempts to cross the track. The railroad company is not required to give the least signal nor alarm whatever. This may be good law, but we deny that it is good common sense. It is as much the duty of the railroad company, in our humble opinion, to warn those who may be obliged to cross its track as it is the duty of the traveler to stop and ascertain whether there is a train approaching. There are hundreds of instances where it is impossible to tell that a train is approaching. This is invariably the case where two large trains pass each other near a crossing, and yet because the traveler does not walk out into the middle of a track and gaze in the direction of the passing train to see whether another is approaching, if any accident happens, the railroad is in no way responsible, though by giving a very slight alarm it could have avoided the accident. The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania is notorious for its subserviency to the railroad interests, and this decision is only another evidence that there is much ground for the allegation.

The inventive genius of the country has had its attention drawn to this matter of giving proper alarms at crossings, and other important points along the line of railroads and the result is that an idea has been patented by G. Natcher, esq., of this place, which by the action of the cars sounds an alarm rods or miles in advance or rear of a train. If the Pennsylvania Railroad had been using this ingenious affair, the accident to Mr. Beale could not have occurred. If Courts, however, will shield railroads in the manner in which it has done in the case in question, signal lights, bells and all the various alarm or danger signals may as well be abolished.

PROFESSOR LIGHT'S BALLOON LANDS AT WARRIORSMARK, HUNTINGDON COUNTY.—A Countryman Fires His Rifle at the Air-Ship.—A Pleasant Aerial Voyage.—Prof. John A. Light, the intrepid aeronaut, and Mr. Tom Bell, the young gentleman who accompanied him on his fourth voyage from this city yesterday afternoon, arrived home last evening on the Mail train. They both report an exceedingly pleasant voyage throughout, the highest altitude attained being 8,200 feet. We have been furnished with the following record kept by Mr. Bell:

Cut loose at fifteen minutes past three o'clock; in two minutes rose to an elevation of 2,700 feet; at twenty-one minutes past three 3,535 feet; 25 minutes pest three 7,000 feet; half-past three 8,200 feet, the highest altitude reached. Encountered heavy cumuli; threw out ballast and checked descent. Descended gradually until within 2,000 feet of the earth and then sailed along very rapidly for a distance of about six miles. Landed on farm of Michael Funk, within the limits of Warriorsmark, Huntingdon county, distance about 22 miles (air line) from Altoona, at precisely four o'clock, having made the voyage in one hour and three quarters, although the total distance traveled was about 36 miles.

A short time before the balloon landed, and while it was still at an elevation of 2,000 feet, a countryman named Martin Pend, a resident of Huntingdon county, who has heretofore prided himself on being a remarkably good shot, fired at the air-ship, supposing it to be an elongated specimen of the American Eagle. From the direction that the bullet took it is supposed to have lodged in the tower of the Huntingdon Presbyterian Church. Anyhow it didn't come within a mile and three-quarters of the balloon. The countryman was fearfully scared when he discovered his mistake, dryly remarking that it was the "first time that old shooting-iron went back on him."

While the professor and his companion were busily engaged in rolling up their balloon the people of the surrounding country crowded in upon them in droves of three-score and ten. One enthusiastic gentleman named George S. Hawk, imbued with that spirit of patriotism which animated our forefathers in '76, proposed to raise a subscription for the strangers, supposing them to be two peripatetic colporteurs going about the country doing good. As the sum total of the contribution amounted to only one dollar, and that one dollar donated by Mr. Hawk himself, it is fair to presume that the denizens of Warriorsmark do not take much stock in colportage. The dollar was accepted with thanks and will be donated to the relief of the family of Captain Jack, the lamented Modoc Chief, who was recently strangled to death way out upon the prairie, where little children dwell, etc.—Altoona Tribune, October 24.

LITERARY NOTICES.—Appleton's Journal.—A new novel by Christian Reid, author of Valerie Aglmer, and Morton House, will be commenced in Appleton's Journal of the date October 25th. The title is "A Daughter of Bohemia." It depicts life in a Southern city, and exhibits all that dramatic power and constructive talent which have marked the previous novels of this author, and given her a high place among American novelists.

The National Crop Reporter, published weekly at Jacksonville, Illinois, is devoted to the publication of reports from reliable correspondents in all sections of the United States, showing the condition during growth and location after harvest of all the leading agricultural crops and live stock. These facts as received will be submitted to the public in the most condensed form, accompanied by comprehensive editorial summaries. In addition, all reliable intelligence bearing upon the above topics will be culled from leading European exchanges and presented in the columns of the Reporter.

A series of five map-charts will be published during the year, showing the location respectively of the corn, wheat, cotton, tobacco and sugar producing crops, and giving such information as to local character, average product, etc., as may be shown most satisfactorily to the eye.

With the means of securing reliable information available, the Reporter will be made an indispensable aid alike to the farmer, the merchant and the manufacturer, a source of intelligence no business man can afford to disregard.

To farmers, planters, and those engaged in the raising of live stock, the Reporter offers the best possible means of securing the largest return for their labor by enabling them to determine as to the most favorable time for disposing of their surplus product. The publication of the Reporter having been contemplated primarily more especially in the interests of the agriculturist, the mass of our information having to be derived from this class—to whom the largest benefits inevitably revert—it becomes a matter of importance to every one addressed that he interest himself in several ways, viz: first in securing for the Reporter at least one reliable correspondent in his county; next, to the extent of subscribing for a copy of the work, and last and all the time in furnishing us either directly or through the correspondent, all desirable information. Notice of inaccurisies in reports will be thankfully received.

Terms:—The publication will not derive its support from advertisements, but will depend upon its merits for a sustaining patronage.

The publication will be conducted by Co-operative Association. An annual membership, costing $10, will entitle the party to a copy of the Weekly Reporter throughout the year, and to the series of five charts.

Where a society has taken a membership, extra copies of the Weekly Reporter may be obtained by individual members at $5 per annum.

To those not members the subscription will be for the Reporter alone $5, or for the Charts, each $2.

All communications should be addressed to The National Crop Reporter, Jacksonville, Ill.

The Presidents of the United States: 1776 to 1876.—This is the title of a beautiful Photographic Picture, 24x30 inches, just issued by L. A. Finley & Co., 16 Cedar Street, New York. We cannot conceive of a more appropriate picture for the parlor or the office than this. It should be in every house in the land. It is instructive as well as ornamental. The design is tasty, and well conceived. In the centre is a large oval photograph of Washington, a very superior likeness, taken from a copy of Stuart's celebrated painting in Fanueil Hall, Boston. This is surrounded by seventeen smaller photographs, representing each of the other Presidents. The photographs are all by Bogardus, the celebrated photographer, President of the National Photographic Association, and the acknowledged head of the art in this country. Every picture is a gem, and is surrounded by a gilt oval, and the whole by an ornamental border in gold. At the head of the picture is the American Eagle, with outspread wings, clutching in its talons the starry banner. Under each portrait is the name of the President it represents, the State from which he was chosen, and the years he served. At the bottom of the picture is printed in ornamental style the title. The whole is mounted on extra thick photographic card board, ready for framing. The picture, unframed, is furnished at $5, and framed very handsomely in black walnut, ornamented in ebony and gold, with cord and everything complete for hanging up, for $10. The publishers will forward the same to any address in the United States upon the receipt of the price.—Daily Graphic.

Art in Our Schools.—We call the attention of the Boards of Education, School Directors, Trustees and Teachers throughout the land to the report of the proceedings and the remarks of Dr. H. D. Ranney, upon the occasion of the presentation of a beautiful photographic picture of the Presidents of the United States to Grammar school No. 26, of this city, by the publishers, Messrs. L. A. Finley & Co. The introduction of well-conceived and appropriate pictures, engravings and paintings, in our schools, is a good idea, and carries with it many strong and conclusive arguments in its favor. Art in this shape makes impressions upon the youthful mind that time cannot efface. The picture in question is eminently appropriate for such a purpose, and we trust no parsimonious policy will deter the introduction of this work of art and instruction in our schools generally.—N. Y. School Journal.

Lippincott's Magazine for November contains, among other seasonable and attractive articles, a sparkling description of London Balls, by a Londoner, who divides these festivities into the public, the semi-public, and the private ball, and sketches in a graphic and piquant style, specimens of each variety. A story which can hardly fail to attract general notice is entitled The Livelies. The writer, Mrs. Sarah Winter Kellogg, author of Her Chance, Mr. Twitchell's Inventions, etc., was a sufferer by the Chicago fire, and has here woven into the thread of a most entertaining story a striking and thoroughly realistic narrative of her experience during the great conflagration, and the scenes, both pathetic and ludicrous, that came under her observation. The New Hyperion, with its spirited descriptions, is also carried forward another step, landing the hero in new embarassments. Under the title of A Strayed Singer, Miss Kate Hillard gives a well written paper sketching the career and analyzing the writings of Thomas Lovell Beddoes, a poet of the Elizabethan type, but belonging to the nineteenth century, and, though little known to general readers, ranked by critics among writers of a rare and peculiar genius. A lively article on the Isle of Wight gives a very agreeable picture of the renowned "Undercliff" with its charming scenery and genial climate, and describes the former residence of Tennyson—from which he was driven by the intrusions of his admirers,—the present abode of Miss Sewall, the cottage once inhabited by the famous Dairyman's Daughter, and other objects of interest. The usual attractive variety of the Monthly Gossip, several pleasing poems by Miss Lazarus and others, and some keenly written critical notices, complete a number which exhibits the best qualities of magazine literature, while promising entertainment for readers of every class.

The First Impulse.—This is the title of an entirely new and original $2.00 steel engraving, which the publishers of the Schoolday Magazine are giving free to every subscriber for 1874. This Magazine is the handsomest and best Dollar Monthly published anywhere, and would be cheap, even at $1.50, but when this attractive picture is given into the bargain—all for $1.00—we should think everybody must subscribe. A three cent stamp sent to the publishers, J. W. Daughaday & Co., Philadelphia, will bring all the particulars.

Scribner's Monthly.—The November number of this Magazine begins a new volume. Edward King's carefully and profusely illustrated paper on Old and New Louisiana, in the Great South Series, is remarkable for its calm and dispassionate statement of the actual state of affairs in New Orleans and Louisiana generally. Two American serial stories are begun: Katherine Earle, by Adeline Trafton, author of the American Girl Abroad, to run through the year, and the other, Earthen Pitchers, by Rebecca Harding Davis, which will be concluded within three or four numbers. Mrs. Froude's historical sketch of an English Abbey, is also begun here; and in Stedman's series on the Victorian Poets, there is an admirable paper on the "most inspired of women," Elizabeth Barret Browning. In the same number appears a biographical sketch of Stedman, by A. R. MacDonough, with portrait, in the series Younger American Authors. Prof. Newcomb gives an interesting account of the making of the new great telescope at Washington; there is an illustrated story by Edward King, Only Half a Woman; a story by Louise Chandler Moulton, For Pastime; Dr. Holland's Topics of the Time are, A Greeting to our English Readers, St. Nicholas, The New York Observer, and Old Types. The Old Cabinet is written "In the Woods." The Departments of Home and Society, Culture and Progress, Nature and Science and Etchings have their usual variety of contents.

The Phrenological Journal for November, confirms the oft-repeated opinion of the press at large, that no one can read that publication without deriving some practical good. It is full of meat for the mind, well served and savory. Witness articles like these: Rev. Dr. Blanchard, Pres. of Wheaton University; The Briton, the Inspirational Race; Our Immortality; Growth in Character and Heart; Conversations about Faces, with numerous illustrations. Money, Its Functions and Requirements, which our Capitalists should all read; Application of Art to Dress; Wives who Henpeck; Address to Young men; The Late Panic; Nothing New Under the Sun; Literary Peddlers; Grace Greenwood's Bear; Failure in Business, etc., etc. Price 30 cents. Write at once to the Publisher, and secure the volumes for 1874. S. R. Wells, 389 Broadway N. Y.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

Answer to "Oneida."

MR. EDITOR:—Some one writing for the Globe, from Oneida, does great injustice to the citizens of this borough as well as to his own township, and to the county in general. He assumes the style of the "weeping prophet," which is far too lofty for his "brains," and the mantle of the moralist, which he has long since worn threadbare and in tatters, so that it will no longer hide the hypocrite within it. He sets himself about moralizing upon the result of the late election, which has evidently disappointed his hope and expectation. He wishes it to be understood that the subject "deserves to be treated with sincerity and candor." But does he so treat it? He asserts and intimates recklessly facts and fancies—falsehoods manufactured out of the whole cloth—and piles slanders and libels upon his neighbors and fellow-citizens with a zest that is astounding. He is particularly hard upon the borough of Huntingdon; but his own township and the county in general feels the sharp point of his censorious pen.

"In your town," says he, "I am credibly informed that the scene was most disgraceful, liquor having been furnished in such abundance that every alley was a drinking saloon, and that every third man you met was drunk." Think of this, ye people of Huntingdon! Was the often repeated remark. that "it was the quietest election and the least drunkenness ever known in Huntingdon," a delusion and a lie, or is "Oneida" a defamer and a liar? The charge is false—the emanation of one who has been sorely disappointed by the result of the election. Again, he says, "In our own quiet community the same sickening picture of human depravity was painfully visible." I will not repeat the specifications, which follow this sweeping charge, but will leave it for the voters of that township to speak and act for themselves. If the charges are true the guilty parties should hide their faces in shame—if untrue, the manhood of that township should make the author of them hide himself from the scorn and indignation of an outraged community. "Oneida" was, no doubt, disappointed and angered at the result of the election in his own township, and he moralized with vengeance against those who could not be induced to act the same treacherous part which he acted.

Now, as the writer for the Globe professes to be not only a sincere and candid man, but also a moral, religious temperance man—withal opposed to the defeat of the Local Option law—he has some plain and simple duties to perform. If he believes or knows that whereof he writes, and has such evidence as justifies him to publish to the world that every alley in Huntingdon was a drinking saloon, and that one-third of the voters of the town were drunk, it is a case that calls loudly and plainly upon him to prosecute these open violaters of the law, or at least to furnish the names of the proprietors of those saloons to a constable or to the District Attorney, and see to it that they are prosecuted and punished to the full extent of the law. I would not give a pinch of snuff for the temperance man, no matter how pious and moral, sincere and candid he might be, who would let such flagrant violations of the Local Option law pass unpunished. What manner of a temperance man can he be who, with whisky flowing like an ocean around him, is content to moralize over it?

But again, he says he knows who, to his "certain knowledge, obtained money from two of the candidates and it is said whisky also, both of which were freely plied during the day to secure votes." Now here is another good chance for a moral and religious temperance man to display his sincerity and candor, and make a good record for himself. A bold, open, unequivocal charge, by an eye witness, of candidates buying votes with money and whisky, a clear violation of the election laws and of the liquor laws also, for which the perpetrators are indictable; and I call upon this "Oneida" moralist not only for the public good, but for his own sake, to bring the offenders to justice, lest the failure to do so will induce all sincere and candid people to set him down as an unmitigated and indiscriminate slanderer, the most contemptible creature that walks on the earth!

HUNTINGDON.

From Shirley.

SHIRLEY TOWNSHIP, Oct. 22, 1873.

MR. EDITOR—Dear Sir:—I see by the official election returns that the Potato Bugs have in part fulfilled their mission by defeating part of our ticket. Such men as Esqs. McCarthy and Lee, as good men as were ever before the people of this county, are defeated with such stock as Dunn, Green, Wright, Gilliland, &c., poor imbeciles, who would sacrifice all their future prospects, (though that cannot be much, from the amount of common sense they have displayed in becoming tools for such men as Woods and Guss, to defeat the Republican ticket) for this purpose. And look at the rest of the thugs at the head of the clan. Ex-Sheriff Neely, Adam Heeter, Jim Glasgow, J. P. Stewart, Samuel P. Smith, the Evanses, one of whom is a County Commissioner, and Logan, all of whom have been the recipients of political favors! What would they have thought of a man, calling himself a Republican, that would have turned around and used every means, fair and foul, to defeat them? Yet they have done this very thing with the very men who voted and worked for them years ago. And there is that posey of a Thompson, who has been honored by the party, unmerited and undeserving, as we know, was busy in the clan of th emost contemptible and treacherous Guerrillas ever thrust upon any community, deceiving hundreds of honest and unsuspecting Republicans into voting their ticket, who by scores, we now hear, are denouncing them in the bitterest terms, when they see that they were sold for less than a mess of potage. It is my opinion that the first duty of the County Committee should be to read every one of these Thugs and ingrates out of the party, where, by their own acts, they have placed themselves; and that most magnificent of all fizzles, Guss, ought to be covered with tar and pebble dashed with potato bugs and drummed out of the county. He fizzled in preaching; he fizzled as an editor in Juniata; he fizzled as Principal of his school in Cassville; he has fizzled in politics, and as an editor in this county—and in what has he not fizzled? Echo answers, what? But we are glad to know that we have true men in the Republican party in this county who can neither be bought or driven from the path of duty,—such this county delights to honor, and their memory will be cherished by posterity. And we must say all honor to Huntingdon borough; her citizens have proved to have more good common sense than a great part of the balance of the county.

Respectfully yours,

A REPUBLICAN.

PHILADELPHIA MONEY MARKET.

PHILADELPHIA, October 25.—The monetary situation in this city continues to improve slowly, the banks paying out currency quite freely and relieving the outside market of the severe pressure which has characterized it for a month past, and enabled borrowers to obtain more favorable rates, though these continue high, considering the general stagnation in trade. Yesterday and to-day the rebound in stock values has quickened the demand for call loans on collaterals, and the rate remains firm at 10 cents. Yesterday we heard of paper passing current at 1 per cent. per month, but this is exceptionable beyond all doubt.

Gold opened and closed at 108¼, after touching ⅞.

Sterling Exchange is stated at the following rates: 60 days 106⅞; 30 days 108¼.

Government Bonds show a further advance on most of the list.

Stocks relapsed into dullness, and prices were barely maintained. Sales of City 6's new at 100⅞ @101, and Lehigh Gold Loan at 78½.

Reading railroad sold at 50½; Penna at 45⅞; Lehigh Valley at 54⅞@⅞, and United Companies of New Jersey at 112.

Lehigh Navigation sold at 23⅞, and Farmers' and Mechanics at 123.

PHILADELPHIA TRADE REPORT.

PHILADELPHIA, October 27.—Bark is steady at $35 per ton for No. 1 quercitron. Tanners' Bark is nominal.

In Cloverseed nothing doing. Timothy is in fair request and sells at $2.70@3 for large and small lots. Flaxseed cannot be quoted over $2@3.05.

The Flour market is quiet, but prices remain without change. There is no inquiry for shipment, of moment, and the home consumers purchase only enough to supply present necessities. 3,000 barrels City Mills sold on private terms, and 600 barrels in lots at $5@6.25 for extras; $7,12½@7.25 for Iowa and Wisconsin extra family; Pennsylvania, do. do. Rye flour sells at 5.25 per barrel.

There is no improvement in the Wheat market. Sales of Pennsylvania and Western red at $1,45@1,50; amber at $1,60@1,65; and white at $1,65@1.88, the latter for fancy. Rye ranges from 85 to 90c. Corn is quiet: sales of yellow at 61@62c, and Western mixed at 60@62c. Oats are unchanged: sales of 3000 bushels Western at 48@50c for white, and 41@46c for mixed.

Whiskey is weak; sales of Western iron-bound at 96c.

To keep these disease in the system is a wrong not only to the victim himself but also to society as the innocent may be contaminated. Farm and Household.

God Bless the Farm.

God bless the farm—the dear old farm!
God bless it every rood,
Where willing hearts and sturdy arms
Can earn an honest livelihood!
Can from the coarse and fertile soil!
Win back a recompense for toil.

God bless each meadow, field, and nook,
Bege ımed with fairest flowers!
And every leaf that's gently shook,
By evening breeze or morning showers,
God bless them all! each leaf's a gem
In Nature's gorgeous diadem.

The orchards that in early spring
Blush rich in fragant flowers,
And with each autumn surely bring
Their wealth of fruits in golden showers
Like pomegranite on Aaron's rod,
A miracle from nature's God.

And may he bless the farmer's home,
Where peace and plenty resign,
No happier spot 'neath Heaven's high dome
Doth this broad, beauteous earth contain
Than where, secure from care and strife,
The farmer leads his peaceful life.

Unvexed by toil and tricks for gain,
He turns the fertile mould;
Then scatters on the golden grain,
And reaps reward a hundred fold;
He dwells where grace and beauty charm.
For God hath blessed his home and farm.

How to Keep your Winter Apples.

The following excellent suggestions are offered by the Vermont Farmer:

The way that most farmers save their winter apples is to hole them up, like potatoes, or pile them up in a cave or cellar. By this method you not only lose much time, but lose very many apples; and what you do keep over winter are in a bad condition. Apples may be kept in barrels that are quite open; but the best and cheapest way is to keep them in grates or boxes made in the followiog manner; The ends or headpieces should be ten or twelve inches wide by fifteen to eighteen long. They can be sawed or split. Nail your boards on the bottom and sides, leaving places for ventilation. Have your boards all the same length—about three feet.

When you gather your apples from the trees, put them in these boxes (be careful not to bruise them) and lay the boxes on each other in your apple house. Two men will handle these boxes with ease. You can look your apples over with but little labor. When you are ready to ship, just nail a board over the top and you are ready. In this way you get your apples to market in good condition and handle them but once. Keep your house as cold as possible at all times, without freezing.

Threshing Timothy.

The Country Gentleman says: The best way to get out timothy seed is to thresh it with a flail—for although a machine will work more rapidly, yet the seed which it cuts and wastes, more than overbalances the advantages. When threshed out, then spread it out on the floor, go over it again with the flail—then pass it very slowly through a fanning mill, so as not to blow out the seed, (which can soon be learned by examination;) then pass it through a sieve fine enough for the clear seed to pass but retaining the chaff covered seeds, and thresh the latter again—and so on, till all is saved. For home use, all this care is unnecessary, but only to fit it for market is extra labor required.

PEACH TREES.—Dr. George B. Wood, President of the American Philosophical Society, having noticed that his peach trees, after producing a few crops, ceased bearing and died in a few years, and believing that the cause of the decay was worms at the root of the tree, dug holes five or six inches deep at the base of the stem, scraped away all the worms that could be found, and filled up with wood ashes fresh from the stove, strong in potash. This was done in the autumn, with a result in the following spring at which he was astonished. The trees appeared to have been restored to all their freshness and vigor—put forth bright green leaves, blossomed copiously, and bore a heavy crop of fruit. He attributes the favorable results more to the effects of the potash contained in the ashes than to the destruction of the worms.

A DRY CELLAR.—A correspondent of the American Agriculturist tells how to make a dry cellar out of a wet one. He says: 'Dig out the bottom of the cellar, commencing at the sides 2 inches below the walls, increasing the depth to the center, so it shall have the form of an inverted arch; then the earth should be pounded firmly and well cemented, allowing the cement to go under an inch or so, and up the sides two feet. Then the bottom should be filled up level with sand and paved. If this is all properly done the cellar will be permanently dry.

ASH BATH FOR FOWLS.—An English poultry journal says: Wood ashes are excellent and make the best bath a fowl can have, but coal ashes causes them much suffering and discomfort.

Fumigating poultry houses with sulpher, thrown on glowing coals in an earthen vessel, and keeping the house closed for several hours, is said to be a perfect remedy for insects of all kinds. The poultry must of course be removed before the experiment.

A FARMER should never go to town without carrying something to sell—butter, eggs, potatoes, poultry, or even a load of wood. By so doing his income is quite sure to exceed his outgoes. There is no more miserable and poverty-stricken way than to keep sending to stores and shops, and having things charged, with the expectation of paying for them when special crops come off, for these crops seldom or never turn out as well as was expected.

PARSNIP STEW.—Pare and slice together, in the proportion of one large parsnip to three or four medium sized potatoes. Cook 30 or 40 minutes in a small quantity of water, so that when you have put in a little flour thickening it will be nearly as dry as hash; though some might prefer it more moist. A little cream improves it. With no other addition than a little salt, this forms a delicious food.

VINEGAR BITTERS.

PURELY VEGETABE.

FREE FROM ALCOHOL.

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of Vinegar Bitters?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of Vinegar Bitters in healing the sick of every disease man is heir to. They are a gentle Purgative as well as Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflamation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

Dr. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters act on all these cases in a similar manner. By purifying the Blood they remove the cause, and by resolving away the effects of the inflammation (the tubuecular deposits) the affected parts receive health, and a permanent cure is affected.

If men will enjoy good health, let them use Vinegar Bitters as a medicine, and avoid the use of alcoholic stimulants in every form.

PROTECT YOUR BUILDINGS!

Which may be done with less than quarter the usual expense by the use of GLINE'S PATENT SLATE ROOFING PAINT. A roof may be covered with a very cheap shingle, and by the application of this slate be made to last from 25 to 30 years. Old roofs can be patched and coated and made to look much better and last longer than new shingles without the Slate, for ONE-THIRD the COST of RE-SHINGLING. The cost of Slating new Shingles is only about the cost of simply laying them, and the Slate is FIRE-PROOF against sparks and live coals falling upon it, as may be easily tested by any one, and as appears from the fact that Insurance Companies make the same Tariff that they do for Slated Roofs. For tin and iron it has no equal, as it expands by heat and contracts by cold, and never cracks or scales. For Cemetery fences it is particularly adapted, as it will not corrode in the most exposed places. Roofs covered with Tar Sheathing Felt can be made water tight at a small expense. The Slate or Paint is EXTREMELY CHEAP! two gallons will cover a hundred square feet of Shingle roof, or over four hundred of Tin or Iron. Price of the Slate ready for use is 80 cents per gallon, $16 per half barrel, or $30 per barrel of about 40 gallons, freight from New York added. We furnish and apply the material for $2.50 per 100 square feet freight added. The Paint has a very heavy body, but is easily applied with a 4 or 6 inch coloring brush. On old and rotten shingles it fills up the holes and pores, hardens them, and gives a new and substantial roof that will last for years On curled or warped shingles, it brings them to their place and keeps them there. It fills up the holes in tin or felting roofs and stops the leak; one coat is equal to ten of ordinary paint. The color of the Slate when first applied is of a dark purple; in about a month it changes to a light uniform slate color, and is, to all intents and purposes, Slate. It is a slow dryer, but rain will not affect it in the least in one hour after it is put on. Roofs examined, estimates of cost given, and when required, will be put in through repair. Orders respectfully solicited. Address B. J. WEISTLING, Jr., Middletown, or R. R. WIESTLING, Huntingdon, Agents for Dauphin, Lancaster, Lebanon, Huntingdon, Bedford, Blair and Cambria counties.

Pianos.

PATENT

ARION

COMBINES MANNER'S FOUR

SIMPLIFYING PATENTS,

THE MOST VALUABLE PATENTS EVER USED IN PIANO-FORTES.

PATENT ARION.

REVERSED WOODEN AGRAFFE.

THE COMPOUND REST PLANK.

THE FULL IRON FRAME.

AND THE SUSTAINING IRON BAR.

A FEW REASONS

WHY THE

ARION PIANO

IS SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS:

The ARION PIANO-FORTE has greater power than any other Piano-Forte manufactured.

It will Stand in Tune Longer, and in its mechanical construction it is more perfect, and, therefore, more durable, than any instrument constructed in the usual modern style.

The arrangement of the Agraffe, the manner of stringing, the peculiar form and arrangement of the Iron Frame

SUPERCEDES ALL OTHERS.

The use of a bar (which is a part of the Iron Frame on a line with the heavy steel stringing,) gives where most needed, and in this respect all other pianoes fail.

The construction of the WREST PLANK, into which the tuning Pins are inserted, is such that it is impossible for the pins to come loosened, or the Wrest Plank itself to split, as is too often the case in other Piano-Fortes.

The Extraordinary Evenness

throughout the scale, the excellent Singing Quality, the

LENGTH AND PURITY OF VIBRATION,

all go to prove what we claim, viz: that the

ARION PIANO-FORTE

Is the Best Instrument Manufactured.

ALSO

ESTEYS COTTAGE ORGANS,

WITH THE

VOX JUBILANT

AND

VOX HUMANA.

THE NE PLUS ULTRA OF

REED ORGANS,

universally acknowledged to be the BEST Organ made for Sunday Schools, Churches, Parlors and Lodges.

Having more power, with a sweeter tone, than any other Organ in the market notwithstanding the representations of agents interested in the sale of other Organs, we do fully warrant every Organ for the period of five years, (at our own expense.) We have no agent in Huntingdon at present, therefore all who may want one of the best Organs extant may receive, by corresponding with us, a price and descriptive list from which a selection may be made, to which we will give our personal attention, and guarantee satisfaction,
